This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

+ Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
+ Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
+ Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
+ Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

2. Quarter Sessions commence on the Monday in this week.

5. Half-yearly dividends on some species of Stock become due.

8. British Museum opens, 10 till 4; Reading Room, 9 till 4.

9. Fire Insurance due at Christmas must be paid by this day, or the Policy becomes void.

18, 19. Melton Mowbray fair—horses, cattle.

26. Brunswick—miscellaneous, including manufactured goods, &c.

Registration.—Births.—Persons should cause their children to be registered within forty-two days after birth, by giving personal notice to the registrar of their district, without any fee whatever.

Deaths. Intimation should be given of deaths in the same manner as births. This is of importance to be done early, as the undertaker must have a certificate to give to the minister who reads the funeral service, without which he may refuse to bury the body.

As the cause of death is to be entered, sound discretion should be exercised in ascertaining the real nature of the deceased's death, for which important purpose every facility should be given.

* The Monthly List of Fairs is only a selection of the more important ones. When they fall on Sunday, they are usually held the day after. We have also added a few of the German Fairs which are of commercial interest, each of which continues for three weeks.

Tenancy.—A yearly tenant must take care that he gives notice to quit his premises half a year (or a quarter, if by agreement), before the time of the expiration of the current year of his tenancy.

Wills.—From Jan. 1838, all wills made in England came under the provisions of the new Wills Act. By it, all property may be disposed of by will; all wills must be in writing, and each must be signed at the bottom or end by the testator, or, if he is unable, by some person on his behalf, by his direction, and in his presence; and two, or more, attesting witnesses (who must be present at the same time) must also sign the will. If the testator wishes to acknowledge or reward the attesting witnesses, he must do it in some other way than by bequeathing them anything: for legacies to attesting witnesses, or to the wife or husband of an attesting witness, are void. No person under twenty-one can make a valid will. Wills are revoked by subsequent marriage; otherwise a will can only be revoked by destruction or by the making of a new one; and alterations in wills must be made in the same manner as a will is made.

POOR LAW LEGISLATION FOR 1859.

The only act passed during the year directly relating to Poor Law Management was the 22 and 23 Vict. cap. 49, "to provide for the payment of debts incurred by Boards of Guardians in Unions and Parishes, and Boards of Management in School Districts." By this it is enacted that from the passing of this act (Aug. 13, 1859) all debts legally incurred must be paid within the half year in which they become due, or within three months of the expiration of the half year; but the Poor Law Board may extend the time for any period not exceeding twelve months in any case they may deem fit. Any debt incurred within two years before the passing of this act may, if the guardians think proper, be paid within twelve months out of funds in their possession; and if due beyond two years and less than six, they may provide for paying by annual instalments, not exceeding five, if the Poor Law Board, after an open investigation, is satisfied such debt is legally due. Attorneys' bills of costs are not to be paid until the termination of the suit, or till they cease to be retained. No order for contribution to be invalidated on the ground that such call includes a balance due from any parish or parishes due when the half-yearly accounts were made up; but when any such call shall have been paid by any parish, and the funds shall not have been applied to the proper purpose, any funds which may be required to make good the deficiency shall be levied on each parish in the Union according to its rateable value.

SANITARY LEGISLATION AND PROGRESS

DURING 1859.

DURING the past year comparatively few additions have been made to the previously existing "Sanitary Acts" upon the statute book. "Sanitary progress" has, nevertheless, during the same period been steady and most effective. The small amount of legislation required for the extension of "improvements in towns," &c., and for securing or facilitating the execution of works calculated to advance the cleanliness and healthfulness of the respective localities, may indeed be regarded as a most satisfactory proof that the legislature has already provided enactments which, if intelligently, earnestly, and honestly carried into operation, will suffice for nearly every part of the United Kingdom. Peculiar cases may, of course, and most probably will, in some few instances, occur which special legislative provisions will be required to meet and satisfactorily settle. But a very short trial has, this far, proved that the comprehensive and valuable statute, known as the Local Government Act, 1858 (21 & 22 Vict. cap. 98), is generally found sufficient, by furnishing a well considered system, for conducting their own sanitary regulations and improvements by the respective localities. That act, indeed, together with the unrepealed portions of its useful pioneer, the Public Health Act, 1848, and with the enactments incorporated with them, have been most properly described as constituting "a very complete code for the purposes of town improvement." Those enactments, which are wide and varied enough to prove suitable and sufficient for the largest cities and most populous places throughout the country, are likewise so arranged that they may be adopted by comparatively small towns, and even rural parishes. In illustration of this remark, it will only be requisite to refer to the succeeding list, which enumerates where "Local Boards" have been formed in the numerous districts therein named, after the adoption of the act by the local representative bodies, where any such exist, or by resolution of the owners and ratepayers where no such bodies did exist. The great object of that "code for the purposes o town improvement" was that, by the adoption of the Local Government Act, not only boroughs, towns, and places possessing known and defined boundaries, might obtain sufficient powers for their own government and improvement, without recourse to the central executive or to the legislature, and without expense or delay, but that places not already possessing defined boundaries might, by a very simple process, with a very brief delay, and at the most trifling expense, acquire boundaries (for the purposes of such Act) clearly set forth, described, and formally recognised in the manner prescribed by the statute. By this means, the most comprehensive and carefully considered Act ever passed for towns improvement has been placed within the reach of all—from the largest and wealthiest boroughs and cities—which, from their extent and importance necessarily require a multiplicity of provisions to meet the varied demands comprised in the sanitary regulation of such densely massed populations—to parishes and country towns which, though comparatively small, need good, intelligent and simple enactments for their local government, and to secure due precautions being taken for preserving and advancing the public health within their respective limits.

The result of the passing of this Act, during the session of 1858, has been most marked in diminishing the number of local sanitary bills, which have been since brought before the notice of the legislature. It is curious to notice the great difference in these bills since 1854. In the session of that year, no fewer than 85 bills were introduced into Parliament to effect improvements in towns and districts: in 1858 there were 44; in 1859 there were 25; and in the ensuing session, it is expected that there will not be half that number, while even in those instances, there will be special reasons marking the cases as somewhat exceptional and peculiar. The fact is, that prior to the passing of the Local Government Act, 1858, very few, if any, local improvement acts conferred powers so extensive and complete as those conferred by it. Another fact, and a very important one, is that those local improvement acts could only be obtained, after, at the least, some weeks' or months' delay, at a cost varying from a minimum of £600 or £700 (when unopposed) to a maximum which it is impossible to fix. It would appear, however, from parliamentary returns, that £2,000 cannot be taken to be a high average of the cost of local improvement acts when opposed. Such a sum would, in many places, go a good way to supply the public works most urgently required; and fortunately such sums need now no longer be diverted from this use, to defray the expense of obtaining powers which the Local Government Act confers, without cost and without delay, and in the most complete form that experience has yet suggested.

It cannot, upon these grounds, be considered but as a natural result that the number of sanitary acts which will have to be enumerated here, as having passed during the sessions of 1859, is unusually small. Indeed, it has never previously fallen to our lot in the introductory remarks on "Sanitary Legislation and Progress" to present so small a list upon the subject; and we can only repeat that, so far from regarding it as any proof of diminished zeal or anxiety on the part of localities to secure the blessings of proper public health regulations, resulting from enlightened local improvements and sanitary enactments, we cannot view it otherwise than a most striking proof of the efficiency of the legislative provisions which were passed in the session of 1858, to extend, complete and perfect, the previously existing statutes respecting the health of the people at large.

The following are the only acts which passed during the past year which seem to come at all within the scope of the present observations.

1. Burial Places.—An act "more effectually to prevent danger to the public health from places of burial," which enacts, that where persons having the care of any place of burial alluded to or described in the act 20 & 21 Vict., c. 81, neglect to comply with the requirements and directions of any order in council within a reasonable period after the issue of such order, the churchwardens of the respective parishes may act in their stead, after having duly obtained a secretary of state's sanction to proceed in such a matter. These provisions were much required and cannot fail to prove of great use.

2 & 3. Local Government (Supplemental Acts).—These acts merely confirm certain provisional orders, prepared and signed by the secretary of state for the home department, under the powers of the Local Government Act (1858). They relate to the several districts of Leamington, Newton Heath, Worthing, Teignmouth, Wigan, Battle, Knighton, Cardiff, and Derby. It may be remarked, also, that these provisional orders furnish examples of the great relief and assistance furnished to Local Boards, under the Local Government Act, enabling them to modify previously existing local acts, in extending their borrowing powers (to enable the execution of requisite sanitary works), and in extending, also, the period within which the sums so borrowed must be repaid from 30 years (the previous limit) to 50 years, under the provisions of the present Act.

4. Public Health Act, 1859—"to amend and make perpetual the Public Health Act, 1858." This was a most desirable measure, and under its provisions some very valuable regulations as to vaccination have been already issued by the Privy Council.

5. Recreation Grounds—"to facilitate grants of land to be made near populous places for the use of regulated recreation for adults, and as playgrounds for children." Though perhaps not directly entitled to be enumerated among acts relating to the public health, we cannot refrain from inserting it as being well calculated to aid usefully other more serious and important sanitary objects.

Various inclosure acts also passed during the sessions of 1859, all leading naturally to the improved drainage and cultivation of the several localities, and all therefore, though perhaps indirectly and slowly, tending to the amelioration of the healthiness of those localities.

"It can never be too strongly urged" (says Mr. Tom Taylor, in the introduction to his very useful edition of the Local Government Act, 1858), "that local improvement is, above all, a local matter; and that in a country strongly opposed to centralisation, like England, all that Government can properly be called upon to do is to place the means of local improvement as cheaply and simply as possible within reach of the population. It cannot coerce people even into being clean and healthy. The good sense which can appreciate the advantages of cleanliness and health, the intelligence which can determine the means by which these advantages may best be secured, and the true economy which can set their direct cost against the indirect cost of filth and disease, must be contributed by the public. Government in England cannot affect to supply these qualities. Where they do not exist, it is idle to assume the responsibility of enforcing local duties, the recognition of which implies the existence of precisely this good sense, intelligence, and economy. The responsibility, at least, is one which, under the circumstances of this country, cannot be properly met, and had better, therefore, not be undertaken by Government, alike in the interests of national independence and of public enlightenment. Better, in all matters of local concern, a real progress of local opinion, however slow, than premature and delusive action of the central authority. It is to be hoped that the framers of this Act have not erred in supposing that many of the town populations of England can appreciate, and are ready to avail themselves of the powers which the act confers." These passages are quoted to shew the ground on which it may be assumed that the progress of the act referred to has already been most satisfactory. So new a system necessarily takes time to become known and fully understood. The fact, however, that the provisions of this statute have been adopted in so many and in such important places within a period of little more than a year from the date of it receiving the royal assent, may be safely taken as proof that it was a measure much wanted, that it has met the requirements of numerous large and wealthy populations, and that it has, quietly, quickly and at little or no cost, furnished those localities with valuable and comprehensive provisions which could not have been previously obtained except at great expense, great delay, and, frequently, great local excitement and animosity. The complete list of places by which the Local Government Act, 1858, has been adopted will be found in the list of local boards comprised in the following tables. It will only be requisite here to mention that among the places which have adopted the entire act, are the following:—

Eastbourne (Sussex), Redditch (Worcestershire), Bicester (Oxfordshire), Wells (Somerset), Mold (Flintshire), Hanley (Staffordshire), Wrexham (Denbighshire), Bideford (Devon), Uckfield (Sussex), Ellesmere (Shropshire), Dartmouth (Borough of Clifton, Dartmouth, Hardness), Fairfield (Derbyshire), Teignmouth (Devon), Holyhead, Ludlow (Shropshire), Ruthin (Denbighshire), Nottingham, Buxton, (Derbyshire), Boston (Lincolnshire), Marlborough (Wiltshire), Scarborough (Yorkshire), Canton, Llandaff (Glamorganshire), and Lees, Ashton (Lancashire).

The act has also been partially adopted in the following among many other places, to complete Local Acts, and to meet local requirements: — Liverpool, Burnley (Lancashire), West Hartlepool (Durham), Colchester (Essex), Cheltenham (Gloucestershire), Gosport (Southampton), Bury Saint Edmunds (Suffolk), Longton (Staffordshire).

These places furnish examples of the great value of the Local Government Act in various localities where the Local Acts, being in some points defective, can be supplemented and completed by the selection from the provisions of the first named statute of those sections which are absent from and yet requisite in the respective Local Acts.

In addition to the above named places, in which the act has been wholly or partially adopted, boundaries have been settled in the following places, after local inquiry and report to the Home Secretary:— Redditch (Worcestershire), Mold Green (Yorkshire), East Vale (Staffordshire), Buxton (Derbyshire), Fairfield (Ditto), Swindon (Wiltshire), Sutton Bridge (Lincolnshire), Llandaff (Glamorganshire) Ditto, Canton, (Ditto), Bala (Denbighshire), Roath (Glamorganshire), Dresden (Staffordshire).

And the act has subsequently been adopted and local boards appointed in each place, except Dresden and Llandaff.

Byelaws from nearly ninety places have, also, during the past year, been submitted to the office for confirmation by the Home Secretary. Each set of byelaws has been carefully examined and reported on prior to being submitted for such confirmation.

The progress of the act may, indeed, be considered most satisfactory, and the most ardent sanitary reformers may reasonably hope, that under its judicious provisions, the good cause will steadily and not slowly advance.

With respect to actual works of sanitary progress, we cannot do better than extract the following passages from the very interesting paper on "Public Improvements" in the Companion to the Almanac, for 1860.* The well-informed writer of that article states justly, that in sanitary matters, the metropolitan drainage scheme is the one grand work on hand. Both the northern and southern main drainage works had been commenced, and were being vigorously carried forward when they were for a time interrupted by the strike of the bricklayers. Of the northern system, the high-level sewer, which commences at Hampstead, and is carried to the river Lea, a distance of seven miles, is that on which attention is first concentrated. The heaviest works at present in progress, among the heaviest likely to occur throughout, are those by the Lea near Old Ford, the scale of which is sufficient to show the onerous character of the undertaking. Works connected with the mid-level line are in progress in various parts of London. The low-level is not commenced. For the southern high-level drain, operations have been commenced at Deptford, where is to be the temporary outlet, and at Peckham. The low-level works have not, we believe, been begun. There is to be no mid-level sewer on the southern side of the Thames. In the country, sewerage works of more or less extent have been completed (or nearly so) at Blackburn, Lancashire; Newport, Monmouthshire; Stratford-on-Avon; Worksop, and elsewhere. This year has, also, witnessed the completion of the Glasgow Waterworks, an undertaking worthy of old Roman times, by which half a million people in the city and its suburbs will be supplied with perfectly pure water brought from Loch Katrine, a distance of 34 miles. The Act of Parliament for the construction of the works was obtained in 1855, and the works soon after commenced. Loch Katrine lies at an elevation of 360 feet above the sea. The rugged district, which intervenes between the loch and the city, has been penetrated by tunnels, crossed by aqueducts, or traversed by iron pipes, in the execution of the necessary works for ultimately conveying to the city no less than 50,000,000 gallons of water per day. There are 70 tunnels 8 feet in diameter, measuring in the aggregate 13 miles in length: the longest being at the southern extremity of the works, and 2,650 yards in length; that at the upper or eastern end of the loch is 2,325 yards long. Loch Katrine, Loch Vennachar, and Loch Drunkie, presenting an area of above 4,000 acres, have all been made available to three times the extent required in the supply of the city. The engineer was Mr. J. F. Bateman. The entire cost of construction, purchase of works, compensation, &c., will be nearly 1,500,000*l*. Works on a more or less extensive scale for furnishing an improved supply of water have likewise been constructed at Dorchester, Gloucester, Halifax, &c.; and others commenced at Shepton Mallet and elsewhere.

In addition to all these works, the Local Boards of Health, under the Public Health Act, 1848, and many of the local boards under the Local Government Act, 1858 (though some of the latter have only recently been sufficiently advanced to be ready to carry out works of sanitary improvement), are carrying out systems of drainage and water supply for their respective districts upon the most improved systems, and upon such a mode of mortgaging the rates of each district as bears most equitably and least heavily upon the rate-payers. The result, if the provisions of the Act under which these works are executed, be fairly and fully carried out, cannot fail to be most valuable.

Enough, however, has already been shewn from similar works to justify the fullest confidence. Repeated success, and, it may almost be said, unvarying results, cannot well be doubted. If, indeed, as was lately forcibly remarked by a leader as well as indicator of public opinion,* "if a science can be established by its fruits sanitary science may now take its rank with any of the sciences known to mankind. It no longer pertains to the class of theories, or inquiries, or speculations. Its laws have been tested by experiment and are proved by facts. The object of the new doctrines is an exceedingly simple one —the improvement of public health or the prolongation of human life. We know the standard fixed by nature. We can all recollect that the years of man are three score and ten, and that the age of four score is reached only through labour and trouble. So exactly does this estimate fit all generations that the latest reckoning of our latest calculators produces the very same result. 'It is estimated,' said the Right Hon. W. Cowper in his speech at Bradford,† 'that if all the population were living in healthy condition, and life were only terminated by natural decay, the ordinary age at which men and women would depart would be 80.' What, then, it may be asked, can science accomplish against limits so permanent and invariable? If the days of man admit of little expansion beyond an average term, how is life to be prolonged? The answer is plain. This term, natural as it is, is but too commonly never reached, and the object of sanitary science is to establish it as an ordinary average instead of a notable exception. We cannot prolong the natural span of life, but we can bring this span within the reach of all or many, instead of leaving it to the lot of a few. There is the field for exertion. As it is, at least 100,000 persons die annually in these islands at premature periods and by preventible deaths; and at least 1,000,000 more are wasted and debilitated, from similar causes. Talk of war, indeed! why, what battles or contests ever wrought havoc like this—havoc, be it remembered, not occurring at intervals, like an exceptional calamity, but carried steadily and incessantly through the ranks of our population." These are startling statements, but they are facts. They are not founded on any suppositions, guesses, or theories. Cautious, elaborate, laborious examinations have shewn these results.

It is not easy, therefore, to even estimate the influence of the question of "sanitary progress." But, looking to the effects already produced by sanitary science, there is every cause for hope that the antidote for all the existing evils is in the power of earnest, intelligent and influential men in every district. Here again, the effects of sanitary measures are not imagined. They are stated from facts and figures. Again, the same able writer last quoted observed, "large towns and great masses of men have been actually dealt with, subjected to certain treatment and brought to a certain condition. The original state of the community was first ascertained, and the ordinary 'death-rate,' or the number of deaths in every 1,000 of the population, carefully observed. The simple doctrines of sanitary science were then applied; streams were cleansed, houses were drained, and pure water introduced for consumption. After these measures had been adopted the statistics of mortality in the district were examined once more, and the new death-rate compared with the old one. The evidence of the figures so obtained was completely irresistible. In Liverpool the mortality had fallen from 37 in the 1,000 to 27; in Bradford, from 28½ to 22; in Gloucester, from 27 to 24. Taking an average of 19 towns which had been treated in this way, it was found that the death-rate dropped from 28 in the 1.000 to 21. Perhaps we shall be putting the case still more forcibly by a particular example, though on a small scale. Croydon was taken in hand scientifically some time ago, and provided with good drainage works and good waterworks. When the results came to be investigated it appeared, on a comparison of the five years preceding the reform with the five years which followed it, that an average of 196 lives had been saved in the town every year."

As a striking and appropriate supplement to this, we may remind the reader of the fact that, in the Crimean war, England lost altogether 20,800 men. Of these, 5,000 only fell in battle from the blows of the enemy. Less than one third! All the rest—more than two thirds—15,800 soldiers fell victims to privation and disease. To illustrate, however, the really remarkable effects of sanitary measures, precautionary and medical, we cannot refer the reader to a more striking or singularly impressive statement of facts than that contained in the deeply interesting and suggestive report to the Minister of War (Lord Panmure), by the sanitary commissioners despatched to the seat of war in the East in 1855-56 (viz., Dr. J. Sutherland, Robert Rawlinson, Esq., C.E., and Dr. H. Gavin).

It is a gratifying sign, also, of the great attention now paid to the health of the population, that elaborate scientific examinations are instituted into all the conspicuous causes calculated to deteriorate the sanitary condition of the masses, and consequently to shorten life. An interesting example of this has been afforded by Dr. R. Angus Smith's interesting paper "on the air of towns," read some time since before the Chemical Society. An extract or two therefrom may serve to indicate how much has yet to be done, not only in providing remedies for admitted evils, but in actually discovering the sources whence those evils spring. "If science" (says Dr. A. Smith, writing of the impurities of the atmosphere) "can define precisely the extent of the evils which affect human life, it may at a second stage also attain the important desideratum of a cure, and at any rate any inquiry of the kind must be of interest to all, but especially so to the medical and chemical professions. In studying the air of towns in which coals are burnt, no place can give such an opportunity as Manchester, being the largest manufacturing town of the world, and itself being the centre of a great manufacturing district. Geographically, it is not the centre, being near the outskirts of the district on the south-west side, whilst on every other side manufactures extend for, perhaps, on an average thirty miles. In this district, comprehending many hundred square miles, there is every variety of scenery, but I believe every portion of it may be shown to be influenced by the smoke of the workshops. The tinge of darkness in the atmosphere may be seen making a line of at least forty miles in length, and affecting the appearance of the sky and the landscape. At the same time, it is marvellous how rapidly nature asserts her superiority in all this accumulation made by art. As to the effect on the inhabitants, the question becomes exceedingly complicated, but the registrar-general's returns are an unanswerable reply as to the result of the total influences of the district. Few people seem clearly to picture to themselves the meaning of a decimal place in the percentage of death, and few clearly see that there are districts of England where the deaths at least in some years, and when no recognised epidemic occurs, are three times greater than in others. When we hear of the annual deaths in some districts being 3·4 per cent., and in the whole of England 2·2, it is simply that 34 die instead of 22, whilst even that is too slightly stated, as the whole of England would show a lower death-rate if the towns were not used to swell it. One of the conditions of health, and a most important if not the most important of all, is to be found in the state of the atmosphere." The same writer continues, that "a cure for some of the evils now deteriorating the air of towns ought certainly to be found. Already one cure for the evils connected with organic matter has been made known to us, and that is the removal of the impure matter by means of water. If disinfection were added to this, it might be made complete. The cure of the black carbon or smoke burning is in the hands of every man. The smoke is always blacker as coal is cheaper. Our towns are not in earnest on the subject. For the amount of sulphur in the air there has never been any attempt at a cure by any one, nor has it been generally looked on as an evil. A small beginning of this important subject occurred to me whilst investigating a patent obtained by Mr. Holme, of Manchester, for bleaching smoke. In this patent Mr. Holme claims the use of lime and of common salt mixed with the coals, but finding lime of no value in giving the peculiar white colour to the smoke, he gave it up, and used salt only. It results from my experiments hereon, that Mr. Holme had in his lime a cure for a great sanitary evil, but not knowing the effects, left it for a less valuable substance. I do not, however, propose lime as a bleacher of smoke, but as a remover of sulphur; and I think some mode of using this property may on inquiry be found. The mode of using it requires investigation, and many questions instantly suggest themselves. An inquiry by a public body would probably best find out the true mode of application, or bring to light a more efficient method."

The great interest felt on the subject of sanitary questions is best proved, however, by the variety and importance of the matters brought under the notice of the National Association for the promotion of Social Science, not only at its latest (in Sep., 1859), but at its preceding sittings. The numerous papers there read open up a variety of questions, bearing, in a variety of ways, upon the health of different classes of the community, which, if properly and practically followed out, cannot fail to affect very materially the sanitary condition of those classes. Intelligent and earnest inquiry, if succeeded by energetic action, cannot fail to result in immediate sanitary improvement. Therein may all who feel deeply in the matter rest their sanguine and well-founded hopes; and a few years of proper exertion cannot pass without the result being far more striking and more widely acknowledged even than has been the case within the last few years.

MEMORANDUM RELATING TO THE

WORKHOUSE PROVISION BOOKS,

Forms (C.) 25 & 26; 27, 28 & 29.

MESSRS. KNIGHT & COMPANY beg to announce that, with a view to the diminution of labour, they are prepared to have the several Articles required by the DIETARY TABLE, printed in the above Forms, instead of being, as heretofore, written, in all cases where it may be required, and could, in the course of a few days, have the Books got ready for any Union, on being furnished with pattern sheets, drawn out in accordance with the Dietary in use by the Union.

Blank Forms for this purpose may be obtained, if required.

RETURNS TO THE POOR LAW BOARD.

MESSRS. KNIGHT & CO. have just published a complete Set of Preparatory Forms, for the purpose of diminishing the labour which devolves on the Clerks to the Guardians in the compilation of the WEEKLY, HALF-YEARLY, and YEARLY RETURNS, required of them by the Poor Law Board, for presentation to Parliament.

These Forms, and the instructions with which they are accompanied, have been drawn up by

MR. FREDERICK PURDY,

THE PRINCIPAL OF THE STATISTICAL DEPARTMENT OF THE POOR LAW BOARD.

Messrs. KNIGHT & CO. believe that Mr. Purdy's practical acquaintance with the Statistical Returns in question will be a sufficient assurance of the utility of these Forms.

The Forms are respectively applicable to the following Returns, viz.

No. in List.
131	ANNUAL POOR RATE RETURN. "Preparatory Form"	4*s.* per quire, in Sheets. Books of 1 quire, 7*s.* 6*d.*
131 a	RETURN OF PAUPERS, 1st July or 1st January. "Auxiliary Form"
131 c	WEEKLY RETURN OF PAUPERS, Form B. "Subsidiary Form"
131 b	RETURN OF IN-MAINTENANCE AND OUT-DOOR RELIEF, Michaelmas or Lady-Day Half-year. "Preliminary Form"

The Forms may be obtained in sheets or bound; when filled up, they will constitute "duplicate" copies of their respective Returns; and afford the Compiler, when used as bound books, a ready means of testing his current Returns by comparison with those of a preceding or corresponding period.

HILL'S SHEET READY RECKONER;

ADAPTED FOR THE USE OF POOR LAW OFFICERS AND GENERAL TRADERS AND DEALERS.

IN the performance of his duty during five years as Relieving Officer to the Parish of St. Luke, Chelsea, the compiler of the SHEET READY RECKONER found the absolute want of such an assistance—that of a perfectly accurate system of calculation, adapted to the business of Parochial Relief, to which he could turn in an instant without difficulty.

With this Table, Clerks to Guardians and Relieving Officers can find out any given sum required, from One Farthing to Five Shillings, at a single glance. What is useful for this especial purpose is equally available for the use of Traders and Dealers. There is no Ready Reckoner existing so compact and so cheap.

MANUAL FOR THE MASTER AND MATRON OF THE WORKHOUSE,	3	6
" RELIEVING OFFICER	2	6
" TREASURER	1	6
" MEDICAL OFFICER	3	0

N.B.—The regulations which relate to Poor Law Officers are found in separate Orders of the Poor Law Commissioners, and in many distinct communications, and are for the most part intermingled with others relating to different Officers and subjects of an entirely separate character. It has appeared to be convenient to detach for the use of each Officer all that relates to him, both as regards his appointment and his duties, so that he may readily find, in his own Manual, what it concerns him to know, without having to seek for it in the larger collection.
